4. Advisory Business

America First Investment Advisors, LLC (AFIA) is an independent investment advisory firm managing equity, fixed income and balanced portfolios for individual investors and institutional clients. Advisory services include analysis and review of portfolios and advice concerning acquisition, retention, management, re-investment and disposition of cash, securities and other assets.

We invest pursuant to guidelines and policies established by the client. Clients may impose restrictions on investing in certain securities or types of securities by providing written notice. Upon request, we will provide financial planning advice to help our clients better understand their long-term needs for retirement and other significant life events.

For employees involved in portfolio management and financial planning, AFIA requires a college degree and a minimum of 2 years of experience in an investment related industry or alternatively, 10 years of experience in an investment related industry. Additionally, portfolio managers and financial planners must have successfully completed the Series 65 (Uniform Investment Adviser Law Exam) or its equivalent. Eric Ball and Barry Dunaway hold the Chartered Financial Analyst® designation. CFA® and Chartered Financial Analyst® are trademarks owned by CFA Institute. Matt Holloway and Katerina Wiese have obtained the CFP® certification. Certified Financial Planner Board of Standards, Inc. owns the certification marks CFP® and CERTIFIED FINANCIAL PLANNER™ in the U.S., which it awards to individuals who successfully complete the CFP Board's initial and ongoing certification requirements.

As of December 31, 2018, AFIA had regulatory assets under management totaling $348,002,581. These assets are managed for individuals, pension and profit sharing plans, trusts, estates, and charitable organizations as well as corporations and other business entities.

AFIA was founded in 1994 as a wholly-owned subsidiary of America First Companies, LLC (which later changed its name to The Burlington Capital Group). In October 2014, AFIA was purchased by AFIA Holdings, LLC and became a fully independent subsidiary and its only subsidiary. AFIA Holdings is owned by AFIA's employees and three other individuals.

AFIA is registered as an investment adviser with the US Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

Registration with the SEC does not imply any certain level of skill or training.

5. Fees and Compensation

Fees charged may be negotiable but will generally follow the schedule outlined below.

Assets Under Management	Annual Fee
Initial assets up to $500,000	1.25%
Additional assets between $500,001 to $ 1,500,000	1.00%
Additional assets between $1,500,001 to $5,000,000	0.75%
Additional assets over $5,000,000	0.50%

For all clients, management fees are payable in arrears on a quarterly basis. Clients have the option of having fees deducted directly from their account(s) or paying by check. Investment advisory contracts provide termination provisions which allow either the client or AFIA to terminate the agreement at any time by telephone and confirm in writing within five business days. As of the effective date of termination, any fee owed AFIA will be paid by client on a prorated basis.

Sales-Based Compensation

An adviser that accepts compensation from the sale of securities to a client has an incentive to base investment recommendations on the amount of compensation it will receive rather than what may be in the client's best interest. We do not receive compensation on either the purchase or sale of securities. Some of our Investment Advisor Representatives do receive incentive-based compensation from investment management fees generated by client accounts, and this can represent a significant portion of their compensation.

Other Fees

Clients will also incur brokerage and other transaction costs assessed by brokers and/or custodians. Other fees may also include custodian fees or mutual fund expenses. These costs do not represent income to AFIA. In order to minimize client fees, we will generally select no-load mutual funds or ETFs when selecting these types of investments for client portfolios. Please refer to Item 12 "Brokerage Practices" of this brochure for a more detailed discussion of our brokerage practices.

6. Performance-Based Fees

We do not charge performance-based fees, and no supervised person manages any accounts that pay performance-based fees.

7. Types of Clients

AFIA provides investment advice to individuals, pension and profit sharing plans, trusts, estates, and charitable organizations as well as corporations and other business entities.

We generally require a minimum of $300,000 in investable assets to start a new client relationship.

8. Methods of Analysis

Equity Philosophy

Our clients become owners of a business when we invest their assets in a stock. It is our goal to find good, well-managed companies that are available at prices below what we think they are worth.

In our review of a company's business, we look for:

- A strong balance sheet
- Cash flow in excess of what it takes to run the business
- An identifiable market niche that provides a competitive advantage

In our review of a company's management, we consider:

- Ability and experience
- Rationality of capital allocation
- Pro-shareholder orientation

In our valuation process, we consider:

- Company profitability and expected growth
- Values of similar companies in the industry as well as prices paid for similar companies in merger transactions
- Valuation level of the stock market

We will not invest in a company's stock if we don't understand how to value its underlying business. Our process gives us a target price which drives both our buy and sell disciplines. Simply put, we strive to buy stocks of good businesses when they sell below what we think they are worth and sell them when they reach fair values. When fully invested, most of our equity-oriented client portfolios will have 15 to 25 stock positions. It is not unusual for us to hold cash in a portfolio while we are in the process of building equity positions or when we deem it to be prudent.

Fixed Income Philosophy

Bond investors are lenders. We pay attention to the factors that would influence a prudent lender's decision-making. These include credit quality, interest rate risk, and liquidity.

In most cases, we will invest in fixed income securities through exchange-traded funds (ETFs). ETFs can provide diversification at lower cost. For larger accounts, we may buy individual bonds, typically choosing from among Treasuries, Agencies and Corporates. Transaction costs reduce bond portfolio returns, so we try to keep turnover low.

While we normally do not trade based on a forecast of the direction of interest rates, we may at times choose to emphasize shorter or longer duration securities.

Risk of Loss

Investing in securities involves risk of loss, which clients should be prepared to bear.

9. Disciplinary Information

No legal or disciplinary actions have been filed against AFIA, its advisors or its management personnel that would be material to a client's or prospective client's evaluation of the integrity of the firm or its personnel.

10. Relationship with Other Financial Institutions

Conflicts Resulting from Other Financial Industry Activities

Some advisors sell other financial products and services in addition to investment management. These may not be in the best interest of their clients. AFIA only offers investment management and financial planning services.

11. Code of Ethics

We have established rules of conduct designed to ensure high ethical standards for our employees. The purpose of the Code is to prevent activities which may lead to or give the appearance of conflicts of interest, insider trading and other forms of prohibited or unethical business conduct. The reputation of our firm is a direct reflection of the conduct of each employee.

A copy of our Code of Ethics is available to all clients or prospective clients upon request.

We allow employees to own and trade securities that we also recommend to clients. We recognize that we have a fiduciary duty to place our clients' interests first and have established policies to avoid conflicts of interest. These policies include:

- Requiring prior approval by an officer of AFIA for employee trades.
- Prohibiting the purchase or sale of securities by an employee directly ahead of any client purchases or sales (front-running).
- Prohibiting an employee from having the firm act as a principal for its own account by knowingly buying from or selling to a client account (principal trading).
- Prohibiting an employee from buying from or selling between different advisory clients (agency cross-transactions).
- Requiring that the Chief Compliance Officer monitor the brokerage account of all employees and their immediate family members.

The Chief Compliance Officer monitors employee accounts on monthly basis to ensure compliance with these policies.

12. Brokerage Practices

We generally recommend that investment management clients utilize the brokerage, clearing and custodial services of TD Ameritrade Institutional, a division of TD Ameritrade, Inc. ("TD Ameritrade"), member FINRA/SIPC, an unaffiliated SEC-registered broker-dealer and FINRA member; or Schwab Advisor Services (formerly Schwab Institutional), a division of Charles Schwab & Co., Inc. (Schwab) a FINRA-registered broker-dealer, and a member of SIPC.

AFIA participates in institutional advisor programs offered by TD Ameritrade and Schwab. These programs offer independent investment advisers such services as custody of securities, trade execution, and clearance and settlement of transactions. We receive these and other benefits from TD Ameritrade and Schwab through our participation in these programs. Please refer to the section "Soft Dollar" below and Item 14 "Client Referrals & Other Compensation".

Under applicable law, AFIA owes a fiduciary duty to clients to obtain best execution of their brokerage transactions. Our policies are modeled after the guidelines articulated by the regulators; specifically, we believe that, to a significant degree, best execution is a qualitative concept. In deciding what constitutes best execution, the determinative factor is not the lowest possible commission cost, but whether the transaction represents the best qualitative execution. In making this determination, our policy is to consider the full range of the broker's services, including without limitation the value of research provided, execution capabilities, commission rate, financial responsibility, administrative resources and responsiveness.

Our strategy is to direct client transactions to large, reputable discount broker-dealers in order to minimize transaction costs. However, decisions on which brokers to use are not based solely on commission rates.

Trust and confidence is a critical factor; consequently, brokers with a robust national reputation for financial stability and customer service are preferred. Additionally, brokers must also provide technology resources, responsiveness and a strong working relationship with us so that we can adequately serve our clients.

Client Directed Brokerage

Clients are permitted to direct brokerage to a specific broker-dealer if that directive is provided in writing. However, if a client directs us to use a particular broker or dealer, we may not have the ability to negotiate commissions and may not be able to obtain best execution. In addition, a difference in commission charges may exist between the commissions charged to clients who direct us to use a particular broker or dealer and other clients who do not.

Soft Dollar

As a matter of policy, we do not use client brokerage commissions to pay for research and other services.

We may receive research or other products or services from broker-dealers. Some of these assist us in managing and administering client accounts. We receive software and other technology that provide access to client account data (such as trade confirmations and account statements); trade execution (including allocation of aggregate trade orders for multiple client accounts); research, pricing information and other market data; payment of advisor fees from client accounts; and back-office functions, recordkeeping and client reporting.

Broker-dealers may also provide other services intended to help us manage and further develop our business enterprise. These services may include consulting, publications, and conferences on practice management. Broker-dealers may also pay for business consulting and professional services received by AFIA's related persons. Some of the products and services made available by broker-dealers may assist us in managing and administering client accounts, including accounts not maintained at the broker-dealer paying for these services.

The benefits received by AFIA or our personnel do not depend on any amount of brokerage transactions. As part of our fiduciary duty to clients, we put the interests of our clients first. Clients should be aware that when an advisor receives research or other products or services, it receives a benefit because it does not have to produce or pay for the research, products or services. Our recommendations regarding where clients maintain their assets could be influenced in part by the benefits to AFIA and not solely on the nature, cost or quality of custody and brokerage services provided. This may create a conflict of interest.

We have determined that the amount of the commissions charged by the preferred broker-dealers to our clients is reasonable in relation to the value of the brokerage and research services provided.

Trade Aggregation

The aggregation or blocking of client transactions allows an adviser to execute transactions in a fair and equitable manner. Our policy is to aggregate client transactions where possible. In these instances, clients participating in aggregated transactions will receive an average share price (on a round-lot, pro-rata basis, if the order is conducted over multiple days).

If transactions for an adviser, its employees or principals are aggregated with client transactions, these will also receive an average share price.

If a client directs AFIA to use a particular broker or dealer, the client may not be able to participate in the aggregation or blocking of transactions and may not receive the benefits described above.

Brokerage for Client Referrals

Generally, we only recommend to our clients brokerage services offered by TD Ameritrade and Schwab.

We participate in the institutional AdvisorDirect program offered by TD Ameritrade Institutional and receive client referrals. We may recommend TD Ameritrade to clients for custody and brokerage services. There is no direct link between AFIA's participation in the program and the investment advice we give to clients.

As part of our fiduciary duty to clients, we put the interests of our clients first. Clients should be aware, however, that the receipt of economic benefits by AFIA or its related persons in and of itself creates a potential conflict of interest and may indirectly influence our choice of TD Ameritrade for custody and brokerage services. Please refer to Item 14 "Client Referrals & Other Compensation" for additional description of the Advisor Direct program.

AFIA is independently owned and operated and is not affiliated with any broker/dealer or other qualified custodian.

13. Review of Accounts

Our portfolio managers review accounts at least quarterly. In making buy and sell decisions, portfolio managers consider a client's financial situation, including investment objectives and cash needs. Account reviews also may be prompted when securities are added to or removed from our recommended list and when a client requests a large withdrawal. We use a customized portfolio management system to assist in monitoring cash and investment balances.

We review accounts with each client periodically, either in person or by phone. During this discussion, we explore whether investment objectives, customer contact information and documentation are up to date. Clients are invited to ask questions and are reminded that we are available to help them at any time.

14. Client Referrals & Other Compensation

We may receive client referrals from the AdvisorDirect program offered by TD Ameritrade. In addition to meeting the minimum eligibility criteria for participation in AdvisorDirect, AFIA may have been selected to participate based on the amount and profitability to TD Ameritrade of the assets in, and trades placed for, client accounts maintained with TD Ameritrade. TD Ameritrade is independent of and unaffiliated with AFIA and there is no employee or agency relationship between these companies.

TD Ameritrade does not supervise AFIA and has no responsibility for AFIA's management of client portfolios or AFIA's other advice or services. AFIA pays TD Ameritrade an ongoing fee (solicitation fee) for each successful client referral. This fee is usually a percentage (not to exceed 25%) of the advisory fee that the client pays to AFIA. AFIA will also pay TD Ameritrade the solicitation fee on any advisory fees we receive from any of a referred client's family members, including a spouse, child or any other immediate family member who resides with the referred client. We will not charge clients referred through AdvisorDirect any fees or costs higher than our standard fee schedule and we will not pass solicitation fees paid to TD Ameritrade to our clients.

Our participation in AdvisorDirect raises potential conflicts of interest. TD Ameritrade will most likely refer clients to investment advisors that encourage their clients to custody their assets at TD Ameritrade and whose client accounts are profitable for them. Consequently, we may have an incentive to recommend that the assets under management by AFIA be held in custody with TD Ameritrade and that transactions for client accounts be placed with them. In addition, we have agreed not to solicit clients referred to us through AdvisorDirect to transfer their accounts from TD Ameritrade or to establish brokerage or custody accounts at other custodians, except when our fiduciary duties require doing so. Our participation in AdvisorDirect does not diminish our duty to seek best execution of trades for client accounts.

For information regarding additional or other fees paid directly or indirectly to TD Ameritrade, please refer to the TD Ameritrade AdvisorDirect Disclosure and Acknowledgement Form.

AFIA is no longer soliciting referrals from the Charles Schwab referral program, but we continue to pay ongoing referral fees for clients that were introduced to us through their program.

15. Custody

An investment advisor is said to have custody when they are holding a client's funds or securities, directly or indirectly, or have the authority to obtain possession of them. AFIA typically recommends that our clients establish brokerage custodial accounts with either TD Ameritrade Institutional, a division of TD Ameritrade, Inc. ("TD Ameritrade"), member FINRA/SIPC, an unaffiliated SEC-registered broker-dealer and FINRA member; or Schwab Advisor Services (formerly Schwab Institutional), a division of Charles Schwab & Co., Inc. (Schwab) a FINRA-registered broker-dealer, and a member of SIPC.

AFIA is independently owned and operated and is not affiliated with TD Ameritrade or Schwab. AFIA client accounts maintained in the custody of TD Ameritrade or Schwab generally are not charged separately for custody, but these custodians are compensated by account holders through commissions, service fees, and other transaction-related fees.

The SEC has ruled that advisers, such as AFIA, are imputed to have custody in the following areas: (1) because of standing letter of authorization arrangements made by some of our clients which allow us to move cash (such as by using transfers and wires) to third parties and (2) because we have the ability in many of our clients' accounts to directly debit our advisory fee.

Standing Letters of Authorization

"Third-party transactions" refers to when cash or assets are disbursed between two accounts with differently-named registrations. The following are some examples often considered by custodians to fit that description:

- A one-time transfer from an individual client's brokerage account to a jointly-titled checking account.
- A withdrawal from a jointly-titled brokerage account which gets deposited to a checking account titled in the name of only one of the individuals.
- A transfer from an individual's IRA to his or her individual brokerage account.

The SEC has issued a "no-action" letter that allows advisers like AFIA to handle standing letter of authorization requests for our clients if we and the custodial brokerage firm follow several conditions. AFIA intends to continue to help our clients to process money movement transactions provided we can do so safely and under conditions that don't become onerous. We, of course, will let our clients know if we decide in the future not to help any longer with money movement transactions.

Direct Debit of Advisory Fee

Regarding our ability to directly debit our advisory fee in authorized accounts, our management fees are charged in arrears and are based on our clients' portfolio values. We provide our clients with statements of their portfolio holdings on a quarterly basis. Brokers and custodians for our clients also send them statements which show portfolio holdings and activity on at least a quarterly basis. We urge our clients to compare the account statements received from their custodians with those received from us.

16. Investment Discretion

All clients are required to sign an Investment Advisory Agreement granting us the authority to supervise and direct their investments in accordance with predetermined investment objectives and guidelines. AFIA is authorized, in its discretion and without prior consultation with the client to: (1) buy, sell, exchange, and otherwise trade any stocks, bonds, or other securities or assets and (2) place orders and negotiate commissions (if any) for the execution of all transactions in securities with or through such brokers, dealers, underwriters, or issuers as we may select. Any limitations to such authority must be communicated by the client to us in writing.

17. Voting Securities

We have adopted proxy voting policies and procedures to ensure that proxies are voted in the best interest of our clients. This is in accordance with our fiduciary duty and Securities Exchange Commission Rule 206(4)-6 under the Investment Advisor Act of 1940. AFIA is deemed to have the authority and responsibility to vote proxies for those clients where we have discretionary authority. Clients with specific voting preferences must retain their voting authority for their accounts and vote their proxies themselves.

We may abstain from voting or decline to vote proxies where, in our opinion, the cost of voting the proxy exceeds the economic value of the expected effect of the vote on the clients' investment.

Clients may obtain a copy of our proxy voting policies and procedures as well as information about how specific securities were voted by contacting us at 402-991-3388.

Class Action Lawsuits

From time to time, securities held in the accounts of clients are the subject of class action lawsuits. AFIA utilizes Chicago Clearing Corporation to file, monitor, and distribute settlement proceeds. For its services, Chicago Clearing will receive 15% of each client's share of the settlement distribution. We will forward transaction and holdings information for clients on a semiannual basis to Chicago Clearing Corporation for use in filing settlement information.

Clients are automatically included in this service but may opt-out by contacting us and completing the requisite form. If a client opts out, neither we nor Chicago Clearing Corporation will assist in the processing of any settlement claims.

18. Financial Information

We charge management fees in arrears and do not require prepayment of these fees. AFIA has not experienced any financial conditions reasonably likely to impair our ability to meet contractual commitments to our clients.

What we do

How does America First protect my financial information?

To protect your personal information from unauthorized access and use, we use security measures that comply with federal law. These measures include computer safeguards and secured files and offices.

We restrict access to personal information to our employees for business purposes only and are required to safeguard such information.

How does America First collect my personal information?

We collect your personal information, for example, when you:

- are a prospective client or want to open an account
- are a client and we need to provide services to you
- are a client and we need to provide services to you

Why can't I limit all sharing?

Federal law gives you the right to limit only:

- sharing for affiliates' everyday business purposes—information about your creditworthiness
- affiliates from using your information to market to you
- sharing for nonaffiliates to market to you

State laws and individual companies may give you additional rights to limit sharing.
